WHEREAS, Under said statute a recent election to decide whether intoxicating liquors should be sold in the North Liberty precinct of Casey county, the good citizens of said precinct cast an overwhelming vote against the sale of liquors.

RESOLVED 1. That the citizens of Middleburg and Yosemite in mass-me ting assembled, do extend to the citizens of the North Liberty precinct our most hearty congratulations on their noble

2. That we, considering their victory our victory also in the fight against this nefarious traffic, do most sincerely thank each and every voter, who on Monday last, cast his vote against the sale of intoxicating liquors.

3. That we especially recognize the noble services of Elder J. Q. Montgomery, Judge William Myers, Hon. George Stone and others, and congratulate them on their grand success.

4. That the foregoing preamble and resolutions be sent to our friends of the North Liberty precinct to be read in their meeting on the 4th inst., and that a copy be sent to the INTERIOR JOURNAL for publication.

THE CROWNLESS MARTYR OF THE MARRIAGE RING.

BY E. T. SMITH.

(WRITTEN FOR THE INTERIOR JOURNAL.) From his youth up, Mr. Thomas Carparticular night, his brain had been an stock, and shipments rioted through his brain in inextricable confusion.

Putting on his hat, he opened the door leading into his confidential book-keeper's room, and said: 'Fergerson, I'm going home, I'm wool-gathered to-night. over the cotton reports in the morning."

sir," the busy book-keeper took time to write: say, as he anxiously looked up from his ledger.

"Ob! no, just a little 'kink' in my brain to-night. I'll be all right by morning,' said Mr. Carter, as he closed the door.

Lighting a cigar, after reaching his boarding-house, he tried to abstract his mind, and think of nothing; but in vain, for his mind would stray far away to his boyhood's home. The memory of the clear, cool spring under the big poplar, with its crystal waters bubbling up from the cool, gray rocks, the soothing scent of the pines, with their sleepy murmurings; the music of droning bees; the tinkling tenor of the reedy brook, as it trickled over mossy, emerald-clad rocks. a like amount, and if you don't send me all came up with startling vividness before him.

"I do believe I'm going to be sick," he muttered to himself. "When a fellow begins to long for water from the spring der. Now if I were to consult a doctor and tell him of my longings, he'd laugh in my ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., face. He would tell me I had the nostalgia, so I will be my own doctor this time.'

Then he thought how strong and healthy he was, when a boy. What an appetite, what a digestion he had. No indigestion then, no gnawings of dyspepthat old poplar spring, if I could loll around on those moss embossed rocks under the shade of the maples and poplars, and hear the mocking bird singing as it swings on a twig of enowy, hawthorn blossoms; if I could watch through half closed eyes the red bird flashing like a ruby through the emerald leaves, 20 years would be added to my life. My brain would no longer 'jangle harsh out of tune,' but would soon be clear as a bell."

The result of these meditations was that in a week thereafter, Mr. Carter found himself walking down the banks Pigs from registered stock for sale, from the best herds in Ohio and Illinois. Call and examine my herd or address R. H. Bronaugh, Crab Orchard.

It was a bright, sunshiny day in May. A perfect sky, a pastelle in pearl and blue, hung over him, The air throbbed with the music of birds and the murmur of bees; and so sweet was the breath of the breeze with blossoming hawthorns and honeysuckles, that each inhalation was a drink of czone dashed with per. money. fume.

Mr. Carter soon reached the spring. The poplar still spread its protecting shade over it. The rocks were velvity with moss, but the spring itself was clogged with leaves, twigs and other vegetable matter.

"I'll soon remedy that," said Mr. Carter, "I'll give it a good cleaning out, and while the water is getting clear, I'll go down to the old picnic grounds. I hope that will not disappoint me too."

He soon reached the grove. At the lower end of the grove another brook united its waters with the poplar spring brook, and the waters of the two brooks romped and leaped in playful glee over a series of miniature falls. Beeches and elms, oaks and maples shut out, with their emerald canopy, the glare of the door?" sun. Bright butterflies fluttered like winged flowers before him as, admiringly, he walked along. "My! my!" exclaimed Mr. Carter as he stopped spell-bound, "this is prettier than it was when I was a boy. 'fime's wing in stealing o'er, leaves it lovelier than before.'
